

Education Group Issues Challenge

NASHVILLE — Chairmen of Christian education committees and commissions of state Baptist conventions were challenged here to promote the responsibility of Baptist schools in transmitting Christian values from generation to generation.

"It is possible for a child to go from kindergarten through the university and not be told what is right or wrong," said Ben C. Fisher, executive director of the Southern Baptist Convention's Education Commission.

The annual, day-long gathering, designed to orient and inform the state committee chairmen on educational needs and opportunities, was sponsored by the Education Commission and included program personnel from a cross section of Southern Baptist life.

"Baptist schools," Fisher said, "are growing because of their emphasis on Christian values in a time when our culture is developing a different value system than we've ever known."

Allen Comish, director of the church services and materials division of the SBC Sunday School Board, echoed Fisher, declaring, "There is a greater awareness in our nation of a need for moral values than at any time in my lifetime. That says something to Baptist colleges. Educators have lifted up many banners followed by young people. Baptist colleges need to continue to lift up the banner of moral values."

"I'm proud of our Baptist colleges. They have done a splendid job and we ought to say so. We need to make Baptists aware of the great potential of their schools," Comish said.

"Never was there a time," Comish continued, "when Baptist colleges can play such a leadership role as they can now. We need leaders for the new generation. Someone has to challenge them to be leaders in our denomination and our churches."

"We don't give enough attention to what we've done in the past about providing leadership. Basically, leadership of the SBC is a product of the Baptist college," he said, alluding to a survey conducted jointly by the Education Commission and SBC Home Mission Board.

He challenged his listeners to emphasize upgrading religious education offerings in Baptist colleges and universities.

W. Randall Lolley, president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest, N. C., urged the education leaders to explore the dimensions of partnership Baptist colleges have with the six Southern Baptist seminaries.

He emphasized importance of the "personal dimension of partnership." Recalling his own reception as a freshman at Samford University (then Howard College) in Birmingham and the school's influence which led to continue his education at seminary, Lolley noted:

"I was warmly received and shepherded in a direction which helped me think straight." A college, he said, (Continued On Page 2)

Committee Asks $51 Million Budget Goal

NASHVILLE (BP) — A goal of $51 million in receipts through the Southern Baptist national Cooperative Program unified budget was approved here for 1975-76 by the Southern Baptist Convention's (SBC) Executive Committee.

The goal is subject to approval at the annual SBC meeting in Miami Beach next June. It includes a basic budget of $44 million, $1 million in capital needs and $6 million in challenge funds to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the SBC's Cooperative Program. The total 1974-75 budget is $40 million.

The Executive Committee also asked SBC agencies to "submit priorities or action plans proposed for the utilization of funds which might be received from the anniversary challenge goals" and that its program subcommittee "evaluate these in terms of the major convention objectives in recommending the distribution of the funds received in the anniversary challenge segment of the total budget."

Other budget action resulted in approval of a $531,000 operating budget for the SBC Executive Committee for 1974-75 and approval of distribution to the Executive Committee a proportionate share of the Convention Operating Budget overage expected from the Cooperative Program in the final month of the 1973-74 fiscal year.

In other business, the Executive Committee declined to extend SBC Cooperative Program financial support to Baptist Bible Institute in Florida, authorized funding of an image magnification system for the SBC's annual meeting in Miami Beach in 1975 and approved transfer of funds and real property from the SBC Home Mission Board to the SBC Foreign

Board Adopts Record $6,600,000 Budget; Asks Immediate Gulfshore Construction

The Mississippi Baptist Convention Board, in one of its most constructive sessions in years, Monday adopted a record high Cooperative Program budget of $6,600,000 for 1975 and voted to "proceed immediately with the construction of Gulfshore Baptist Assembly."

The record high Cooperative Program budget, which will go to the State Convention in November for final approval, was part of an over-all mission budget of $8,850,000 adopted by the body for 1975, according to Dr. Earl Kelly, executive secretary treasurer of the board.

This will include the $6,600,000 for the Cooperative Program, $1,400,000 for the Lottie Moon special offering for foreign missions, $600,000 for the Annie Armstrong special offering for home missions and the state mission offering of $250,000.

Dr. Kelly, in his annual message to the board, was optimistic in his outlook and predicted an expanded program of work the next few years not only for the board but for all of Mississippi Baptist work.

He pointed to the fact that the proposed 1975 Cooperative Program budget is $1,100,000 higher than the 1974 budget.

The motion adopted to "proceed immediately with the construction of Gulfshore Assembly" will be a recommendation to the State Convention in November, which voted in 1972 to rebuild Gulfshore and directed the board to conduct a campaign to raise $1,250,000 before construction could begin.

The motion to proceed immediately with the construction of the assembly was made by Dr. Beverly Tinnin, of Meridian, chairman of the steering committee and was made soon after an encouraging report on the $1,250,000 "Restore Gulfshore" campaign was given by Dr. David Grant, Jack-

ALABAMA BAPTISTS ARE ASKED TO MISS A MEAL FOR WORLD HUNGER

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (BP) — As a tangible means of showing concern for the starving and hungry people of the world, Alabama Baptists are being asked to forego one meal a week beginning September 22, and to send the cost of the meal through Southern Baptist Convention channels. The recommendation was made here by Dotson M. Nelson Jr., president of the Alabama Baptist State Convention; George E. Bagley, executive secretary and by other leaders.

The appeal from Alabama Baptist officials is similar to that being made by religious leaders of several denominations who met in Birmingham recently to adopt a statement calling on their church members to send the cost of a meal a week for a one year period for disbursement through their respective denominational relief agencies. The amount of $1.50 to $2.00 per week has been suggested.

In response to the effort which calls on religious, political and social leaders to promote the program, Alabama Governor Wallace is expected to sign a proclamation designating a Week of Concern for World Hunger.

Many Changing Attitudes Are Observed Among Israelis

JERUSALEM, Israel (BP) — A change in attitude among both Arab and Jew in Israel is seen by two Southern Baptists living and working in the country.

Ray G. Register and Milton Murphey, Southern Baptist representatives there, recently shared their ideas and views of Israel.

Register, while studying in Jerusalem, lived on the Mount of Olives overlooking the city. He stayed with a Muslim Arab family, subletting a room from a priest.

Each day he traveled over the mountain to the Hebrew University where he was enrolled as a special graduate student.

"I sat in class or drank coffee in the snack bar with Jewish students from Russia, South America and the United States. There were numerous opportunities to interpret to them the feelings of the Arabs in Nazareth, among whom I had lived for the past eight years," Register said.

"To my delight I found an unusual openness to the dilemma of Israeli Arabs, both among the student body and the faculty," he said.

"It was a year of growing in understanding and sharing in the traumas of the land. For the first time I was exposed to the deep-seated feelings of Jews for the country of Israel," Register said. "I sensed their feeling of hopelessness of ever living at peace with their Arab neighbors. It was the year of the Yom Kippur War (October, 1973) and I suffered inwardly as I shared the loneliness and pain of teachers whose husbands and relatives were fighting in a war they did not want."

Murphey was interviewed at the headquarters of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, Richmond, Va., soon after he left Israel for a furlough in the United States. Working with both Arabs and Jews in the Baptist village, he sensed the Israeli feelings too.

"It's not so much talk about Zionism right now as it is talk about survival, survival of the nation of Israel," (Continued On Page 3)

Showing 'The Godfather' On Television: An Irresponsible Decision By NBC

by Harry N. Hollis, Jr.
Director of Family and Special Moral Concerns Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention

(Dr. Hollis is author of a new book on violence, THE SHOOT 'EM UP SOCIETY, to be published by Broadman Press, October 1, 1974.)

An old Halloween story tells of pranksters who slip into a jewelry store and rearrange all the price tags in the display window. Values are turned upside down as expensive items are given cheap prices and vice versa. The next day the laughing pranksters watch customers rush into the store to take advantage of the changes.

NBC's decision to pay ten million dollars to show a movie called "The Godfather" on prime time television on two nights this November is an outrageous example of upside - down values, but there is nothing laughable about it.

The new TV season with its shoddy exploitation of sex and violence makes a mockery of the networks' claim that they recognize they are guests in our homes. "The Godfather" is the essence of unhealthy violence. It is a feast of violence and the food it serves is poisonous. "The Godfather" elicits sympathy for some underworld people who make violence a way of life, and this is what is most harmful about the movie. Furthermore, we have no real hope that the excessive violence will be edited out for TV because Mr. Herminio Traviesas, the NBC official responsible for editing "The Godfather," has offered the ridiculous observation that it "is an anti - violence show." Tell that to a ten - year - old child!

Excessive television violence does cause some people to act violently. To say that TV does not influence behavior is utterly foolish in light of the fact that sponsors will pick up the ten - million - dollar "God-

38 Missionaries, Associates Appointed By Home Board

ATLANTA (BP) — Eight missionaries and 30 missionary associates were appointed for service in 10 states by the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board here in September.

The board also changed the status of four missionary associates to career missionaries and accepted the resignations of two staff members.

The resignations were from James W. Kelly who is retiring after three years as director of the Division of Chaplaincy and from N. Larry Bryson, director of rural - urban missions for the Division of Associational Services, who has been named state director of missions for South Carolina.

The board's Executive Director Arthur B. Rutledge reported Annie Armstrong Easter Offering receipts through Sept. 12 had exceeded $7,000,000 an increase of 18 per cent over 1973.

He said both the special offering receipts and Cooperative Program allocations for the board were up 12.6 per cent.

"The support of our people through the Annie Armstrong Easter Offering, and the Cooperative Program has been outstanding," Rutledge said. "The remarkable way our people are supporting the churches and mission causes is giving us an opportunity to make significant advances that we have not been able to make the last five years."

Missionaries appointed included two each for service in Louisiana, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Nebraska.

John Howard and Shirley Campbell of Louisville, Ky., were appointed by the department of Christian social ministries in New Orleans.

Tommy L. and Linda Fewell of Huntsville, Tex., were also appointed by the Christian social ministries department for service in North Carolina.

Relevance To Earmark Future Theological Education

New Profs Sign Articles — Carroll Freeman (second from right), new associate professor of psychology and counseling at New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, signs the school's Articles of Religious Belief during the annual convocation service. Looking on (from left) are William Rogers, new assistant professor of religious education; Bradford Curry, new director of the doctor of ministry program; and J. Hardee Kennedy, academic dean and convocation speaker. Each new faculty member is required to give written commitment to the articles, which affirm the Bible as the word of God and Jesus Christ as man's only hope for salvation. A native of Petal, Miss., Freeman formerly served as area coordinator for the Mississippi Council on Aging. He is a graduate of Mississippi College, Southern Baptist Seminary, and New Orleans Seminary.

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Theological education and practical relevance must balance on the scales of the future, J. Hardee Kennedy told the student body of New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary during the school's 57th annual convocation service.

Speaking on "The Future of Theological Education," the seminary academic dean projected a future curriculum that would link vocational goals with "a sure sense of divine calling."

The theological program, he said, translates into "a meaningful educational experience mainly in terms of practical relevance."

As an example, he pointed out that the freedom to research the historical relation of the church to marriage would someday be matched by the concern that the church "actually be the church" in ministry to the troubled or broken family.

The student's courses must relate to the world in which he lives, the educator indicated. If current seminary studies divorce the minister's education from his later ministry, he warned, they are doomed to "disappointing, even devastating, results."

The keynote of tomorrow's theological education will be changed, Kennedy said. He added, however, that the "years of fantastic change lying ahead" would be approached cautiously.

The seminary professor of 30 years emphasized that theological education would not undergo an overnight transformation. "We will not abandon programs that are productive," he promised. He also vowed that "our action will follow, not precede, our thinking."

Disclaiming any prophetic inclination — "Most of us are prepared to admit that our foresight and insight are in short supply" — Kennedy previewed the future seminary curriculum as including:

— A climate of openness, characterized by probing and search.

— A new measure of seriousness, defined by a return to basic evangelical concerns.

— An emphasis on ministry, to provide a better balance between the (Continued On Page 3)

In the Southern Baptist Convention division of the budget $12,000 will go to the Northern Plains Baptist Convention (Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota), with the remaining $2,041,000 going to regular SBC causes through the convention's headquarters in Nashville, Tenn.

This is an increase of $353,000 to SBC causes over the amount allocated in this year's budget.

The special offering goal for state missions for 1975 has been set at $250,000 with receipts from this offering to be allocated to certain designated objects that are not in the regular budget, but are "over and above" the 1975 budget of $6,600,000.

The objects listed and amounts are as follows:

WMU programs, $34,700; church building aid, $11,000; pastoral aid, $5,000; new missions, $199,300.

In previous years the state missions special offering receipts were applied to certain objects already in the regular budget but this year the receipts will apply to objects "over and above" the regular budget.

The objects listed to receive the special state mission offering funds will all share on a proportionate basis as the funds are received.

Dr. Grant's report showed that, including funds received, actual pledges received, funds being received from individuals and churches that have not made pledges, funds verbally committed, and funds to be received from churches that made one-year pledges and hopefully will continue them, an estimated $1,340,984 could be expected from the campaign, which is $90,984 over the goal of $1,250,000.

The report further showed that up to date 460 churches have pledged $300,065 and individuals have pledged $122,421, for a total of $1,052,484.

A total of $23,328 has been received from churches that did not pledge and $9,985 has been received from individuals who did not make a pledge, for a total of $33,513.

This, added to the $1,052,484 above, gives a total of $1,085,998.

The report showed a projected figure of $103,516 that should be expected from churches that are giving but which did not make a pledge.

This brings the total for these three groups to $1,189,515.

The report included additional projected figures as follows:

$20,000 from individuals who have not pledged, $51,856 from churches that have made a verbal commitment, $5,000 estimated offerings from churches that have not made a pledge but agreed to take an offering, and $74,613 from churches that have made one-year pledges but which hopefully and have been requested to, will continue them for one more year, for a total of $151,469.

This brings the total expected from the campaign to a total of $1,340,984, or $90,984 over the goal of $1,250,000.

Dr. Grant said that all the funds, both pledged and estimated, from churches and individuals, will be needed, and urged that both churches and individuals continue sending in their gifts.

The board voted to enlarge its own organization, including increasing the number of Executive Committee members from nine to 15.

Enlarging the Executive Committee requires a change in the Convention's constitution, so that part of the enlargement will go to the Convention's committee on constitution and by laws for appropriate procedure.

The board adopted a report of its Business Advisory Committee concerning the recommendations to convert Kitiwake Assembly into a Senior Citizens Home, as follows:

The complexities of a possible Senior Citizens Home to be owned and operated by the Mississippi Baptist Convention deserve much more study than your Business Advisory Committee has had opportunity to complete in 1974. This fact is underscored by the fact that a task force on aging, under the Inner Agency Council of the Southern Baptist Convention, is currently exploring the problem in great detail. Their conclusions should be available some time in the months ahead. The first Southern Baptist Conference on Aging will be held October 23-25, 1974, in Nashville. Much material has been collected, but there are questions that deserve more detailed answers than can be provided by the November Convention. Therefore, we recommend to the Convention:

"That a special committee of five (5) people be appointed by the President of the Convention to continue the study, and that the committee be funded to employ a professional consultant or consulting firm to give guidance in the study, and

"That the committee report through the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board to the 1975 Convention."

The board elected Rev. Al Finch of Jackson as recording secretary, to succeed Rev. Gerald Buckley of Pontotoc, who resigned.

The board abolished its Pioneer Missions Committee and the work previously assigned to it was delegated to the Missions and Evangelism Committee of the Board.

The request of the Education Commission regarding a Capital Needs Program to begin 1976 was referred to the 1976 convention board budget committee.

Man Who Sued Church Said Didn't Get Money's Worth

MIAMI, Fla. (BP) — A man who sued his church claiming he didn't get his money's worth when he tithed (gave 10%) got a refund Wednesday. Hugh McNatt said he was happy after receiving a check for $800.

The 43-year-old unemployed electrical worker had sued the Allapattah Baptist Church for donations he made in response to the pastor's promise that "blessings, benefits and rewards would come to a person" who gave 10% of his wealth. After three years, McNatt said he had not received blessings, benefits nor rewards.

Alton S. Newell, a San Antonio, Tex., businessman who invented the Newell auto shredder, sent a letter to Allapattah lawyer Jeffrey Tew and Donald Manuel, the pastor, saying, "I sympathize with anyone who gives money to the church and sits back and expects God to immediately hand it back to him, with interest, by some specific act."

"I have never tried to make a deal with God like that, but for 36 years my wife and I have found that God will honor those who honor him."

Newell enclosed a check for $800 and an autographed copy of his autobiography. They were given to Mc-

In The World Of Religion

NASHVILLE — Tennessee's 1973 law which specified that all biology textbooks in public schools give equal consideration to all theories of creation of man has been struck down as unconstitutional because it was an act "respecting the establishment of religion" and thus ran counter to "the constitutional doctrine of separation of state and church."

COLOMBIA'S PROPOSED TAX BILL MAY EXEMPT BAPTIST PROPERTY

BOGOTA, Colombia (BP) — Baptist seminaries and church buildings in Colombia will be exempt from national property taxes if a bill recently introduced in the Colombian Parliament is approved.

The bill would grant tax exemption to church buildings and seminaries of all denominations. Presently only Catholic property is tax-exempt. El Tiempo, a Bogota newspaper, said in a front page article that this is the first time in Colombia's history that tax exemption for non-Catholic groups has been suggested.

Tax exemption for all faiths was a prominent plank in the campaign platform of Alfonso Lopez Michelson, who won the Colombian presidency April. Mrs. J. Thomas Norman, Southern Baptist missionary press representative, said that a furor resulted during the presidential campaign when the press misinterpreted his tax program to mean that the Catholic Church would be taxed as other groups are.

The bill would only affect national property taxes, but Mrs. Norman indicated local and state governments might follow suit if the Colombian Parliament passes it.

Illinois Children's Home Short Funds; Official Missing

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (BP) — The business and development director of the Baptist Children's Home in Carmi, Ill., has been missing since August 31, according to a report to the directors of the Illinois Baptist State Association in its semi-annual meeting here.

Executive Secretary James H. Smith told the board of directors, according to the Illinois Baptist, the Illinois Baptist State Association's weekly newspaper, that Paynter had transferred $32,000 in children's home funds to a bank account in his name.

Paynter left Carmi, Smith said, after it was revealed that Paynter had opened a checking account in a bank at Evansville, Ind., under the name of the Baptist Children's Home Association and deposited two checks from an estate settlement totaling $4,000 and $32,721.

Later, Paynter wrote a $32,000 check on the account, the Illinois Baptist said, and deposited it in another account which he had opened under his own name.

"We are not bringing charges against him at this time," Smith told the board, "because we are covered by the bonding company, and that would be their responsibility." He said the home is covered by "a $100,000 blanket bond."

Smith also reported that auditors of the Illinois Baptist State Association are going over all financial records of the home, but that to date they have found no further evidence of misappropriation.

"We are hoping for the best," Smith told the board, which called for special prayer for Paynter and his family. "Our attorney has advised us to be careful in making charges in the hope that Jim will eventually turn up with some logical explanation, as improbable as that now appears."

In other action, the board of directors adopted a 10-year long range plan for Baptist expansion in Illinois and approved a record Cooperative Program goal of $1,825,000 for 1975.

The long-range plans, covering 1975 to 1985, relate primarily to the church development and church extension divisions. It calls for 1,400 Southern Baptist churches in Illinois by 1985. The board adopted a similar 10-year plan for the Baptist Children's Home in 1972.

to get NBC to exercise social responsibility in the face of our moral crisis related to violence.

Christians, called by God to be salt and light, must work to diminish violence. Here are some actions we can take:

1. Write or wire Mr. Bob Howard, President, NBC Television, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, New York, 10020, to protest the showing of "The Godfather."

2. Write to Mr. Richard E. Wiley, Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, 1919 "M" Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20554, to express concern about the showing of "The Godfather" in particular and about excessive TV violence in general.

3. Call the station manager of your local NBC station to urge him or her to reject the showing of "The Godfather."

4. Write to companies in your area who sponsor NBC's Saturday and Monday Night at the Movies to protest the sponsorship of this movie. When we stop buying products from sponsors of exploitive violence, programs will rapidly change.

5. Offer Christian love and justice as the best hope to diminish the violence that is so widespread in our society.

6. Act now; the time is short!

At a time when U.S. Attorney General Saxbe has warned that the very order of society is threatened by violence and crime, it is incredible irresponsible to show "The Godfather." What is wrong with the NBC decision makers? Are they not more than business executives trying to make profits for their company? Are they not also citizens of this country whose streets are unsafe to walk? Do they not care that our cities are concrete jungles of violence? And what about the advertisers? Is profit all they care about? Do they not realize that short-term profits will vanish if order and justice go down the whirlpool of violence?

If the television networks do not do a better job of regulating this kind of violence in their shows, they can expect tighter governmental controls. The people will demand it. But there is a better way: NBC should announce that it is going to cancel "The Godfather" and review all of its other shows to remove excessive violence. The other networks should clean house also.

Southern Baptists should not try to get NBC to drop a constitutional position on morality. But Southern Baptists, and all American citizens, should try

Read Bible Through Emphasis Slated

NASHVILLE — Southern Baptists are being challenged to read the entire Bible in a 12 month period beginning Oct. 1, 1974. "Read the Bible Through in 1974-75," a plan designed by the Sunday School department of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, will be implemented through churches and church leaders. Church members will find outlines for daily Bible readings in 22 Sunday School periodicals, including most teachers' and adult members' quarterlies.

Two devotional magazines, "Open Windows" for adults and "encounter!" for youth, along with "Home Life" will carry both the devotional readings and the Scripture readings for reading the Bible through. The devotional passage will be part of the larger reading for each day.

Items prepared for use in promoting and conducting the effort in a church include Read the Bible Through streamers, to post throughout the church building; Read the Bible Through commitment slips, to sign up people to participate; Read the Bible Through posters, to carry names of readers and record progress; Read the Bible Through book-marks, to be given to people when they agree to do the reading, with a place on the back to keep an individual record; Read the Bible Through stickers, to be used in the home as a daily reminder to read the Bible; and Read the Bible Through certificates, to be awarded at the close of the year to persons who complete the reading.

All items may be ordered from the materials services department at the Sunday School Board. They are listed under "Program Promotion Supplies" on the current undated materials order form.

Committee Asks $51 Million Budget Goal

Mission Board to facilitate previously approved shifting of mission work in Panama and the Canal Zone from the Home Mission Board to the Foreign Mission Board.

The Executive Committee also decided that the SBC Stewardship Commission should retain the "Together We Build" program, which consults with local churches on fund raising for capital needs, and approved continuation of a Long-Range Planning Forum for at least one year after the Cooperative Program's anniversary celebration. The forum was formed by the Stewardship Commission and the Executive Committee to plan for the celebration.

The SBC Annuity Board was granted approval to include seminary students in a 1971 action of the Executive Committee which allowed the board to print and distribute a pamphlet presenting a plan for using earnings from a memorial fund to pay dues necessary to provide retirement for pastors working in "pioneer areas" where Southern Baptist work is new.

The question of Cooperative Program assistance for the Baptist Bible Institute came from the board of the Florida Baptist Convention in 1972 and resulted in a two-year study by the Executive Committee.

The study revealed a definite need for diploma-type Bible education for pastors without higher education and noted that Southern Baptists have been attempting to alleviate the problem through diploma programs on and off seminary campuses, the SBC's Seminary Extension Department, college extension programs and state supported Bible schools in Florida, Texas, Kentucky and North Carolina.

The Executive Committee noted that "numerous local Bible schools exist under private and church auspices. Some states would like to start such schools for local training purposes. To open the SBC Cooperative Program to one or two would mean it would need to be open to all."

The Florida school, however, will continue to receive Cooperative Program funds from the state level.

The committee commended the state convention - supported Bible schools in Florida, Texas, Kentucky and North Carolina "for their forward looking substantial work." It reminded state conventions contemplating such schools "to explore carefully all options open before launching other schools," adding, "We feel that present programs will care for our long range needs in this area."

Last year at the annual SBC in Dallas, two giant image magnification screens cost some $45,000. It's expected to cost about one-half that much in Miami Beach because use of only one screen is anticipated.

The Executive Committee approved

ed funding procedures for image magnification similar to those used in Dallas — one third from the Convention Operating Budget, one third from the SBC agencies on a proportionate basis and one-third from offerings at the convention. If the offering is more than one third, cost to the agencies and the Convention Operating Budget will be proportionately reduced. If the offering is less than one third, the balance will be paid out of the Convention Operating Budget. The estimated cost to all the agencies would be about $8,000.

The Stewardship Commission's Together We Build program had been under study after the Committee of 15, which conducted a four-year study of convention agencies, recommended that it be studied by the Executive Committee's finance committee in consultation with the Stewardship Commission.

The Executive Committee commended the Stewardship Commission for its handling of the Together We Build program.

SBC President Jaroy Weber, in his address to the Executive Committee, alluded to the U. S. Bicentennial, saying he hoped Southern Baptists wouldn't stand on the sidelines but would instead "help America keep in mind that it was founded on the principles of God, which we need to survive as a nation."

"I believe God wants to do great spiritual things in every church in America," Weber said, "America and its churches need revival. We are the people God can use."

Weber said Southern Baptists are people who believe in the Bible as the Word of God but aren't bound by creedal statements.

The New 'Miss America'

21-Year-Old Southern Baptist

ATLANTIC CITY (EP)—Shirley Cothran of Texas, the newly crowned Miss America 1975, said she doesn't smoke, doesn't drink and doesn't believe in trial marriages, but she definitely considers herself a "woman of today."

"I'm a Christian and I believe my body is the temple of God," Miss Cothran, a 21-year-old Southern Baptist from Denton, Tex., said at her traditional breakfast press conference following the pageant.

The Miss America pageant had some competition from 2,000 feminists who were in Atlantic City attending the "Wonder Women Conference: No Myth America," sponsored by the eastern regional conference of the National Organization for Women (NOW).

Judy Murphy, NOW coordinator, said, "By being here at the same time as the beauty queens, we feel we're making a very positive statement to the country — that all women are wonderful, and that it's what's in your head that counts, not what your bust, waist and hip measurements are."

A graduate of North Texas State University, Miss Cothran has a master's degree in guidance and counseling. She had plans to begin a doctoral program in guidance at Texas Christian University. Her goal is to teach at the university level.

academic and the professional worlds. —A mood of experimentation, permeated by innovative processes.

—The development of professional competencies to provide the minister with competency-oriented education.

—A continuing interactive relationship with the churches: "Churches lead the seminaries and are led by the seminaries."

The future curriculum will have its roots in the present one, the administrator assured his audience. "Ministry," he pointed out, "is currently the dominant concept in the classroom and in the clinical activities of the seminary."

He forecast that the emphasis on ministry would increase in the future. "New and creative expressions of ministry in a crowded, mobile, and secularistic society are clearly predictable."

On the subject of church-seminary relationships, Kennedy declared that the present interactive relationship would continue "in spite of periodic denominational dramatics of power-play and name-calling between the 'heretics' and the 'ignoramuses.'"

As to the seminary of the future, he said: "I see the seminary redoubling efforts to provide suitable educational opportunities for ministering people, whether ordained or unordained, college graduates or non-graduates."

Prior to his address, the Articles of Religious Belief, which have been signed by new faculty members as they attained faculty status since 1918 were signed by three new professors: Bradford Curry, director of the doctor of ministry program and coordinator of continuing education; Carroll B. Freeman, associate professor of psychology and counseling; and William B. Rogers, assistant professor of religious education.

Ray P. Rust, acting president, also presented plaques from the board of trustees to two retiring professors emeriti, E. N. Patterson and William rael," Murphy said. "Involved in this survival is the idea of human freedoms which have often been denied the people of Israel. I think you'll find more of an idealism than Zionism."

Many Changing Attitudes Observed Among Israelis

"There is a Zionist feeling but I don't believe it's as strong now as in the past. It depends on whom you are talking to," Murphy said.

According to Murphy, the younger Jews are seeing the needs of the Arabs and are more open to the problems faced by the Arabs than are the older Jews. He said change is taking place. Younger Jews want more of the leaders of Israel to be native-born Israelis instead of immigrants.

Things are continuing to change for the Arabs, too. Murphy finds there are two kinds of Arabs — Israeli Arabs and those living in occupied territory, like on the west bank of the Jordan.

Many of the Israeli Arabs have a measure of economic success, according to Murphy, which gives them a middle-class status. This does not mean that a higher income level has made the middle-class Israeli Arab forget those in occupied territory. All seem to want peace and are caught along with the Jews in a confusion of cultures and religions, Murphy said.

Register echoed the Arab desire for peace by saying, "I learned a great deal living in a Muslim atmosphere. They also want to live in peace and are enduring the traumas of the changing situation in the Middle East."

"It deepened my love for Galilee," said Register, "that green, relaxing mountain area to the north where Nazareth lay nestled securely in the hills that Jesus loved."

"It was there I returned each weekend with a sigh of relief to home and family. This year has taught me in a deeper way why Jesus loved to work in Galilee and why he stood on the Mount of Olives and wept over Jerusalem, the 'city of peace.' I can now pray more intelligently for the peace of Jerusalem, that it may find its Messiah."

The Convention President Speaks

Recently, I was reading an article entitled, "Your Four Keys to Success." In this article there was a section, "What is Your Time Really Worth?" Then there was a breakdown on annual income, how much each hour is worth, and how much an hour per day is worth in a year's time. Although this chart was given on an annual income of $2,000 to $100,000, I want to use the figure $10,000 and illustrate something. According to this article, if you make $10,000 per year, then you make $5.16 each hour. If you lose an hour per day in your work, it costs $1,250. Stating it another way, an hour per day saved is worth $1,250. This is based on 244 work days of eight hours. It does not include lunch or coffee breaks. The time spent (or wasted) on two coffee breaks of fifteen minutes per day is 72 hours per year or $371.52 worth of time. To state this another way, this 72 hours is nine full work days plus the cost of coffee.

I am not quoting this in opposition to coffee breaks, but I do hope it will cause many readers to stop and think of the value of time. It just might be that each of us could help the inflation situation by being a little more conscious of our use of time which is our most valuable commodity. —David Grant.

Good Hope Plans Harvest Day

Harvest Day will be observed at Good Hope Church, Leake County, on Sunday, September 29. Rev. Paul Jordan, pastor, will bring the morning message. Lunch will be served at the church at noon. There will be singing in the afternoon, followed by a special message by Rev. Richard Carraway of Madden. Former pastors, members and friends are invited.

Northwest Hills To Celebrate 6th Year

On October 6, Northwest Hills, Jackson, will be celebrating her 6th birthday, with an Old-Fashioned Day. Everyone attending Sunday school and worship service is encouraged to wear old-fashioned clothes and bring an old-fashioned car or buggy. "We are having dinner on the grounds and invite former members and friends to attend," states Rev. James Morgan, pastor.

Lest We Forget: One Item Every Church Should Consider

By
Darold H. Morgan

Budget time for your church is here again. Inflation hurts. No one needs to tell you that. You'll find inflation in every item of your church budget.

Crucial decisions must be made because the very life of your church depends on how you spend the tithes and offerings.

There is one budget item I want to comment on. This item concerns salary and benefits. As a former pastor, I know how your pastor and staff feel about it. Few will say anything, although they may be hurting. Rising costs makes paying bills hard on them too!

I would like to suggest that your church give substantial salary increases to each staff member to offset soaring prices.

Since 1967, inflation has just run wild. This year, the Government's Consumer Price Index has reflected increases of almost 10 per cent. Predictions are that this rate of inflation will continue.

Along with salary increases, please consider benefits too. If your church participates in the Protection Program offered by the Annuity Board, make sure the dues are based on 10 per cent of total compensation for all your staff. It will take this, Social Security and then some just to exist if the present rate of inflation continues.

If your church is not in the Protection

Program, it should be. Not only do you help the pastor, church staff and their families, but you answer in advance the question "what would our church do financially if our pastor is disabled, dies, or must retire?" The Protection Program provides retirement, disability, widow, child, education and temporary income benefits. And, there are insurance plans for life, disability, and medical coverage.

The Protection Program is a worthy way for you to say "thank you" to your staff for what they do in serving the Lord in your church.

We are ready to help you start a program of protection or upgrade an existing one that will challenge inflation.

Not Always Easy To Be A Baptist

By C. R. Daley, Editor
Western Recorder (Ky.)

The success and strength of Baptists in America today tend to make for presumption, apathy and lack of appreciation for the sacrifices and suffering of early Baptists in the new world. We presume Baptists have always been free and influential. Not so! The religious freedom and other advantages we enjoy today did not come easily but were earned at a high price.

Baptists in many communities of America today not only are free to worship as they please but also enjoy prestige and influence. In southern United States, or the Bible belt as it is called, Baptists outnumber any other religious group. The majority of professional and business men also are Baptists and so are the local political office holders.

Membership in a Baptist church in such areas has become a status symbol. Ambitious business men and public office candidates find it advantageous to be Baptists. Thus Baptists today occupy the kind of favored position enjoyed by Episcopalians in colonial Virginia and Congregationalists in early Massachusetts.

Baptist church membership in such situations tends to lose its true meaning. Generally those things which cost little mean little. It is easier to be a Baptist than not to be in such communities and the cost is in not being instead of being a Baptist. From the beginning it was not so. Maybe one requirement for Baptist church membership should be a study of early Baptists in England, on the continent and in early America.

The first Baptists in America came from England and were seeking freedom from harassment and harsh treatment. But in those days Baptists were poor and passage across the Atlantic was equal to about two years wages and very likely the only way some Baptists could finance the trip was to sell themselves to indentured servitude.

But even for those with the fare it was a hazardous trip. The church historian, J. Davis, tells of the trials of Abel Morgan and his family in reaching the new world. The ship set sail

September 28, 1710. On the second day the wind turned against them forcing the ship to pull into a port and wait three weeks before trying again. But the winds again opposed them and they were forced to wait another five weeks in an Irish port.

By then many of the passengers were ill including the Morgan family but the voyage was resumed. On December 14 Morgan's little boy died and three days later his wife passed away. Both were buried at sea and Morgan finally arrived in America on February 14, 1711, four and a half months after setting sail.

Nor did Baptists always find a haven of religious freedom in the new world. They were among the dissenters expelled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony. In Virginia they even fared worse. There the Church of England was the established church and everyone was required to recognize it. A license from the state was required to preach and licenses were often denied Baptists or Baptist preachers went ahead preaching without seeking licenses. Baptists were harassed for refusing to let their children be baptized as infants and insisting upon immersion for baptism. In many ways these early Virginia Baptists were second class citizens.

Legal persecution and prosecution were common in Virginia in the 1760's and 1770's. Five Baptist preachers were arrested in 1768 and spent 43 days in jail. In 1771 a magistrate and the official parish clergyman invaded a Baptist worship service throwing the preacher and five of his fellow Baptist preachers in jail. Some were whipped and all were commanded not to preach any more. They refused to obey and preached through the windows of the jail. The records reveal that more than 30 Baptist preachers in at least nine Virginia counties were jailed during this era.

These obstinate Baptists and their insistence upon complete religious freedom were part of the inspiration of men like Patrick Henry and James Madison in demanding the freedom which was eventually guaranteed by the inclusion of the Bill of Rights in the United States Constitution. In the 200 years since the persecution of Baptists the scene has completely changed. Baptists today in many places occupy the same kind of prominence and power the Episcopalians enjoyed in early Virginia though without legal sanction.

But ease and commitment are not always compatible. Today a Baptist church is one of the easiest things to get into and the hardest to get out of. Maybe just the reverse ought to be so. A Baptist church should be one of the hardest things to get into and easy to get out of.

Hung Up On A Gold Cross

By J. Marse Grant,
Biblical Recorder, (N.C.)

In the Aug. 3 issue of the Recorder, we mentioned that a Florida man had sued his church for not getting "blessings, benefits and rewards" from the $800 he gave to his church.

Editor Edgar R. Cooper of the Florida Baptist Witness fills us in on this unusual case. He says that a millionaire Baptist layman from San Antonio, Texas, has offered to replace the $800, saying that in repaying the money he would like to receive the blessings that Hugh McNatt claims he did not receive. The plan now, according to the co-pastor of the Allapattah Church, is to settle the suit out of court by replacing the money.

Cooper then puts together some very pertinent thoughts on stewardship:

It may be that McNatt, like so many others when they hear a sermon on tithing, got hung up on a gold cross rather than Golgotha. In his thinking and listening he never got beyond self to sacrifice and service.

Nevertheless, this episode, which must be a first, should help our preaching on tithing. We must never give up on explaining what blessings mean. It will not do to over-emphasize the material aspect of God's blessings to the neglect of the spiritual. Nor dare we fail to trumpet the true purposes of giving. Malachi 3:10 says that if we tithe the windows of heaven will be opened and the Lord will pour out a blessing so great we will not have room to receive it.

It is tragic that so many can see in this promise only material rewards. God may bless us through material gifts, but tithing is no guarantee he will favor us by putting dollars in our pocket. A person may tithe and still go broke. Giving 10 percent does not make up for foolish business practices or lack of diligent work. Neither does tithing stave off the tragedies of life. Disaster may well strike those who give as well as those who do not.

Actually we don't give in order to be blessed, but because we are already blessed. It is unthinkable that we would ever try to buy the blessings of God. We give to be a blessing to others for it is more blessed to give than to receive.

the Moses to leave Burma, where they had been missionaries for fifteen years, they found they could not go by normal routes. Instead, along with thousands of Christian natives, they walked overland toward the Indian border, struggling through dense jungles and over high mountain passes. Then for six years the Moses and about 1,000 natives settled in Hidden Valley, in an unadministered no-man's land between India and Burma. Again and again they felt the power of prayer as they encountered dangerous animals, cleared fields, raised crops. Then when the Burmese government heard of the paradise that had been created in Hidden Valley, again the missionaries were deported. They did not give up, but went to set up a mission among the Lisu in Thailand, hoping some day to be able to go back to Burma.

HOW TO CARRY OUT GOD'S STEWARDSHIP PLAN by Truman Dollar (Thomas Nelson, Inc., paper, 191 pp., $3.95) The pastor of one of the large independent Baptist churches reveals the financial plan used in his church. He makes a comparison of the giving of independent churches and Southern Baptist Churches, as well as others, and shows that Southern Baptists are far ahead of the independent groups in the teaching of stewardship, and in the enlistment of giving by the members. This pastor has adapted many of the plans and programs used by Southern Baptists for and developed them into his own successful program at Kansas City Baptist Temple.

GOD'S TRIBESMAN by James and Marti Hefley (Holman, 144 pp., $5.95) The subtitle is The Rochnunga Pundak Story. The thrilling true story of a young tribesman of the once feared headhunters of Manipur, India who followed Christ and set for himself a goal of getting an education and translating the Bible into the language of his people. One thrills at the power and reach of the missionary message as he reads pages like these, and is made to realize that it is through the winning of natives and letting them win their own people to Christ that is the key to world witness.

EXPERIMENTAL BIBLE STUDY by John W. Drakeford (Broadman, paper, 158 pp.) This book tells how to start and to lead an "experimental" Bible study group; then it offers 26 actual programs for Bible study. Whatever version the group may use, the emphasis is not on history, customs, or original languages; it focuses on personal experience. It encourages group members to share experiences related to the passage being studied and concludes with asking how the Spirit can use these insights to change personal attitudes and actions. Dr. Drakeford, a native of Australia, has for 20 years been a teacher at Southwestern Seminary.

TARA by Michael and Donna Nason (Hawthorn Books, 160 pp., $5.95) This is the true, heartwarming story of a mother and father's struggle to rehabilitate their little daughter, whose near-fatal accident had resulted in severe brain damage. It is the dramatic story of the child's courageous fight to get well, — and the story of the way God has turned a tragedy into a great blessing.

AN OPEN BOOK TO THE CHRISTIAN DIVORCEE by Roger H. Crook (Broadman, 150 pp., $2.95 paper, $3.95 hard cover) In an attitude of Christian love and understanding, Dr. Crook writes to the Christian who is divorced, or considering divorce. First, he urges the Christian to seek divorce only as the last resort. He says that the believer who is thinking of getting a divorce should ask: what will do the least harm to human personalities? In the chapters of this book he explores divorcees' questions on Bible teachings and divorce, emotional stresses, the children, relating to the opposite sex, legal matters, church life, and many more. Dr. Crook is professor and chairman of the Department of Religion, Meredith College, Raleigh, N. C.

A Straight Line to Youth

OK, GOD, SHOW ME!

Our world relies heavily on scientific proof and some may take the same approach to religion.

I'd like to believe in God, but I need some proof that he exists and is all-powerful. I was thinking that maybe I could put him to a test, ask him to perform some special task, and let me know that he is real. Do you think he would respond?

This student was overlooking the most obvious evidence.

Wise persons do not presume to put God to a test. You simply do not look the Almighty in the face and demand that he "put up or shut up!" He doesn't operate that way. He does reveal himself and he delights to do this. But he doesn't do it by playing tricks on people or making things happen so that we can have "admissible evidence."

God reveals himself through his written word, through repeated Christian experiences, through intuitions and our highest judgments, and through the teaching of others.

This analogy illustrates his methods. A man might demand that his wife prove she loves him by doing one certain thing. This proof would be very unsatisfying. It would be much better for her to demonstrate her love over a number of years through small and otherwise insignificant items. These add up to a real certainty.

If you seek dramatic demonstration of God's love, what more could you want than the life and work of Christ? In this ultimate revelation we believe you will find your "proof."

A Woman's World Reaches For

Beyond the Ironing Board

Wilda Fancher

There are some hills and hollows down in Simpson County that more or less belong to us. They're sort of our bartering acres. Though the actual number of times slips fly mind, James could tell you immediately how many times (and why) they're been paid off and mortgaged and paid off and mortgaged while we had some financial need or desire.

Every once in a while we go down to roam around, or to daydream about developing it, or to decide how we'll spend all the money when the folks who leased the mineral rights strike oil. Mostly, though, we talk about building a tiny hideaway house back in the woods high on a hill where we can see out, but not be seen in on. A pondless Walden, so to speak. So we can do like Henry David Thoreau — get away from it all, not permanently, but whenever we choose.

As I write this, we have just spent an hour or so down there, engaging in house-building fantasy — this time deciding on the exact hill and walking the path of the driveway through a hollow.

It was fun, sitting there on a hill, looking up into nothing but sun-green pine trees and velveteen-blue skies, hearing only two sounds that made us know we were not the only two people in the world — the sound of jet airplane motors (and seeing an x of vapor marking a crossing of the paths of two of the unlikely birds) and the braggadocio motors of the cycles of a club of riders whose dust still hung in our air.

Now, James and I both know there won't be any kind of house on that hill for many years — well past boys-in-college years, for sure, and maybe never. But we get our money's worth out of dreaming. One of my students said it beautifully in a writing assignment the other day, "Life gets boring if you can't wish for something or dream about it — if you can have everything the instant you want it."

There is a good bit of resting in dreaming, and resting is scriptural. We're disciples of Jesus; the words He spoke to His first ones, "Come apart and rest," go for us, too.

FEDERAL LAWS AND STATE LOTTERIES — Federal law prohibits the mailing or shipment of interstate commerce of lottery tickets. It also prohibits the announcement on radio or TV of lottery results and the handling of lottery tickets or the proceeds from their sale by banks with federal charters. Attorney General William B. Saxbe has informed the governors of the 13 states that now conduct lotteries that, unless Congress changes the law, he will have to seek a permanent injunction against further operation of the lotteries. The moratorium that the Department of Justice has been observing on prosecutions of state lottery officials cannot be continued much longer without becoming, in effect, a wholesale dispensation. The federal prohibitions are morally and politically ambiguous. Without new legislation or an exemption from present laws, "these lotteries cannot operate successfully in today's highly mobile and intercommunicated society."

INCREASED MARIJUANA ARRESTS — "According to FBI statistics, more than 700,000 persons in the U. S. were arrested for marijuana offenses during the years 1970-72. Arrest figures show a steady increase: from 188,682 in 1970 to 292,179 in 1972. . . Marijuana arrests for 1973 accelerated to more than 400,000. . . A 1971 analysis revealed that 93 percent of all marijuana arrests were for possession, with two-thirds of those involving quantities of one ounce or less."

MEDICAL FRAUDS — Two recent polls reveal some alarming facts: "WMAL-TV in Washington, D.C., . . . checked . . . on all doctors listed in the Yellow Pages there. To their amazement, they found that 10% of the doctors listed weren't licensed to practice medicine. The listings are taken over the phone and no proof of medical credentials is required. "We take their word for it," a phone company representative said. Media & Consumer magazine . . . reports a study made by the San Francisco Bay Guardian, which found much the same results. A check of 200 physicians listed in the telephone book disclosed that 5% are not licensed to practice in California." — News and Views, May 10, 1974.

Yazoo, Honduras: Mission On The Mosquito Coast, Not At Worst Point Of Storm

The following article was already in type when Hurricane Fifi hit the coast of Honduras. Landon and Pat Wilkerson, missionaries to Puerto Lampira, Honduras, were scheduled to return there from the States this week. Now, because of the hurricane, Mrs. Wilkerson and the children will remain in Florida until Mr. Wilkerson can go to Honduras to try to determine what damage has been done to their home at Puerto Lampira, to the medical clinic, and to the model village of Yazoo. At first he could not find space on a plane, for civilians are not at present allowed to fly into the country. However, he did finally secure permission to go and was to leave Wednesday, September 25, to go to Tegucigalpa. From there, he believed that he could find some way to get across the country to the coast. Puerto Lampira is on the northeast coast, 150 to 175 miles from the towns that the hurricane hit hardest.

Mr. and Mrs. Landon Wilkerson

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Owen

By Anne Washburn McWilliams
Fly south 1200 miles from Yazoo City and you can land in a place called the Siberia of Honduras. Go summer or winter and you won't see snow, for there it's always hot. Go any time you like, and you will find yourself almost totally isolated from civilization as you know it in Mississippi.

If you go this week, fly with Landon and Pat Wilkerson, Southern Baptist "faith missionaries" who are returning September 26. Their exile to the Mosquito Coast is self-imposed, as they follow what they feel to be the direct leadership of God. They go with joy, for they have found greater happiness there in the past seven years than they had ever known in their lives.

While in the States for several months, they visited Yazoo City, as guest speakers. Among the different churches, foundations, and individuals helping to support their work are the Agricultural Missions Foundation, and the First Baptist Church of Yazoo City.

Though not appointed by the Foreign Mission Board, they work in complete cooperation with the Board. He emphasizes, "Our work is Southern Baptist, and very closely related to that of other Southern Baptist missionaries in Honduras. We are following the way we have chosen because it is what we firmly believe the Lord wanted us to do — and he has blessed us."

Another couple, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Owen of Arkansas, will join them in October. They will teach the Wilkerson children, their own children, conduct English-speaking church services, perform mechanical work, and assist in developing the agriculture of the area. The latter includes a model village — Yazoo — nameake of the Mississippi city.

As they arrive in Puerto Lampira in the state of Gracias a Dios, the Wilkersons' plane will land on a grassy strip within walking distance of their home. This time they won't live in the grass-thatched hut they first occupied, but will return to the house he built on pilings, on a large lagoon, away from mosquitoes and crocodiles. In a flat marshy land of many lagoons, there is a big one — eight by fifty miles.

Billy, 14, their oldest son, stayed behind in Florida this time to go to school. The other son, 12, and daughters, 11 and four, will continue to study under the Calvert system, as do most other missionaries' children. If they are thirsty when they get home, they can't turn a faucet to get a drink, for there's no running water. In fact, they'll have to wait until the water boils before they can drink it. If they want to plug in an electric fan so they can cool off a bit, they must wait until evening, for electricity is available only three hours nightly. If they want to call their friends in Mississippi or their families in Kentucky or their fellow workers across the country in Tegucigalpa, they can forget it. There's no telephone. Perhaps they could send a radio message, but reception is usually not good.

If they are hungry, they can eat beans and rice, or go to the grocery store to buy a can of Spam (from Guatemala) for $2.25, or a can of peas for $2.20.

Sometimes they get a newspaper, maybe even the Baptist Record — but always late, since the plane comes only twice a week, and a small ship stops only every two or three months. Because the water is shallow, it is difficult for a ship to approach the shore. Long ago, after some rough weather on the sea, a group of sailors was so thankful to find land there that they named the cape Gracias a Dios (Thanks to God). Since there are only eleven cars and trucks in the state, the missionaries usually travel by boat, plane, or on foot (it takes a week to walk across Gracias a Dios).

When the Wilkersons arrived in Honduras seven years ago, there were only three Baptists in the state of Gracias a Dios. Now their mission work is responsible for about 55% of all the Southern Baptist churches in Honduras. "I thought I would be so grateful and honored if the Lord would allow me to help organize at least one church!" he said. Now, as a result of his witnessing and the Lord's leadership, he can report that there are 13 Southern Baptist churches and 14 missions in Gracias a Dios, with 950 active members. In other sections of Honduras, there are now 20 missionaries appointed by the Foreign Mission Board, reporting 27 churches and 1677 members.

Of the 20,000 living on the Mosquito Coast, probably 18,000 are Miskito Indians, who speak Miskito, Spanish, and some pidgin English. Other groups include the Sumo and the Paya Indians. Mission work has been chiefly with the Miskitos, but some contacts have been made with the Sumos, and a plan has been projected for beginning work with the Payas.

How did this couple happen to go to Honduras in the first place? He says simply, but eloquently: "For many years I existed without Jesus Christ and at times actually fought against Him and led others astray. I married a Roman Catholic and continued to live apart from Christ and was driven further from Him by the witness of many 'Christians.' My wife, Patricia, began attending services of a Southern Baptist Church, 9th and 0 in Louisville, Ky. There she was saved in 1966 and after a very real time of personal conviction I too came to the Lord Jesus in the early morning hours. Later the Lord called me to preach. I rebelled, but praise God, He won. Through the months and years my wife and I prayed always to be in the direct will of God. Our ministry took us from the Appalachian foothills of Kentucky to Florida for the migrant ministry there. We both felt a direct call to work with Indians and the Spanish language.

"Many years before I had, as a semi-professional scuba diver, visited Honduras, and particularly remembered a group of isolated, poverty-stricken Indians on the Mosquito Coast, called the Miskito Indians. In obedience to His leading and calling, my wife, three small children and I, on faith, sold our possessions and used the money to go to Honduras. We felt strongly that it was the time for us to go then, with no further delay. We shared this with the First Baptist Church of Apopka, Florida. The church voted to support us with $100 monthly. This was later raised to $300. Others also have given us financial assistance.

"We were the only Baptists in this area. With complete dependence on the Lord, we have watched His wonderful work grow."

Not only have they organized churches. They have a medical ministry also, which Mrs. Wilkerson carries on in a concrete block clinic. Though not a professional nurse, she had some experience at working in a hospital in Louisville, Ky. Now she treats 500 or 600 patients a month — delivering babies, stitching up wounds, pulling teeth. She laughs, "They say I don't hurt! I've just learned to give the anesthetic properly!"

"The Lord gave me the right wife for this job," declared her husband. "Not many wives would have been willing to live here, much less run this clinic!"

"I built an education wing to the clinic for a Bible institute," he continues. "Since lay preachers are the leaders in our churches and missions they can study there. One Miskito, ordained as a minister, also studied

Laurel Men Begin Mission In Honduras

By Albert Jones, Associate Pastor, First, Laurel

A team of area men headed by Dr. Bob Holifield, Laurel dentist, established a dental mission program in Honduras, Central America during the month of July 1974. Ministering with Dr. Holifield for the two-week trip were Dr. Rayford Harris, Laurel dentist; Mrs. Holifield, dental assistant; Earl P. Elkins, electrical and mechanical technician; John Lewis, pharmacist; and Rev. Albert Jones, associate pastor of Laurel, First Baptist Church. The Laurel team established the dental mission in cooperation with Rev. Charlie Harrington, area Baptist missionary to Honduras.

Honduras is the poorest country in Central America and the needs, both physical and spiritual, are unlimited. Ask a Honduran how long he has been in pain and he will likely give you his age. They are such gracious and appreciative people that the team returned from this initial mission trip with the certain knowledge that the ministers had received greater blessings than those ministered unto.

God worked in some wondrous ways. Before the story of His working in Honduras is begun, it is necessary to relate an incident which had great effect upon the entire team as they prepared for this venture. Several individuals, groups, and companies had donated equipment and supplies as God continued to answer prayers. Yet, there remained a particular needed item for which there seemed to be no source. Almost by accident Dr. Holifield discovered a surplus of this item which was soon donated to the dental mission. As he was relating to Earle Elkins how he had found it, how he had really done something, how he had gotten the item donated, Earle interrupted with the story.

Once a man was repairing the roof on a very high barn when he lost his footing and began to slide with great speed toward the edge and a certain fall which could have been fatal. The man looked up in fear and cried out to God to have mercy and save him. About that time his pants snagged on an old nail sticking out of the roof and brought him to a sudden stop. He looked up and said, "That's all right God. This old nail has got me stopped now."

That story not only reminded Dr. Holifield that God was the one getting things done, but it was the beginning of an even deeper awareness among the team members that anything accomplished at home or in Honduras would have to be done by God because the team members were so weak and limited. The team members carried nails to serve as a constant reminder of personal weakness and inability and also as a reminder of the glorious truth, many times proven, that all things are possible through Christ and His power.

A permanent dental mission point was established at Yuscaran, a mountain village some seventy miles from the capital city of Tegucigalpa. (Distances in Honduras are not measured in miles, but rather in hours — Yuscaran is some two and one-half hours from Tegucigalpa on a winding hair-pin dirt and gravel road through the mountains.) Yuscaran, a village of 6000 people is very pretty with its white adobe houses, red tile roofs, and grey stone streets. Thanks to previous gold mining operations in the area, the village has running water — a blessing most Honduras villages cannot boast. This village also is quite blessed in that it has electricity from 6:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. each evening. The dental team used gasoline powered generators to provide electricity for the dental mission day-time operation. The assembly of the complex dental and x-ray equipment in this remote area with no local supplies available had been estimated to take the better part of the first week. With a nail in his pocket, Earle Elkins allowed God to have the equipment functioning and the clinic in operation in less than 24 hours from the time the wheels of the airline touched the runway back in Tegucigalpa. God proved He would work if someone would just get in the way so he could be used!

The team never lost sight of the primary purpose of the mission which was and is to bring people into a living salvation experience with the Lord Jesus Christ. The "Good News" was spread in various ways over the village, and services were held nightly in a borrowed home. Of the 6000 people living in Yuscaran, only three were professing Christians when the team arrived. God supplied a most capable 14 year old Honduran Christian preacher boy, a Wilter Krochman, to translate Rev. Jones' sermons into Spanish. The team members sang hymns, and Earle Elkins learned enough Spanish to sing specials for the people. When the invitation was given at the first service for commitment of life to Jesus as Lord and Savior, the first man God caused to respond came testifying that he was already a Christian and he wanted those he had never told to know it now. Six others came accepting Jesus into their hearts. On the next evening, Monday, six others came accepting Jesus. On Tuesday six came, and on Wednesday (while many in church at home were praying) sixteen invited Jesus into their hearts. On Thursday four others came. The second week ten others were saved. A village of 6000 people and three Christians found itself two weeks later with fifty Christians and a Baptist church and well over a thousand aching teeth removed. God was at work!

A two hour drive from Yuscaran took the team to the end of the road at Oropall, a smaller village with no running water and no electricity. A temporary clinic was set up in an existing Baptist church. Here the team conducted worship services with the Christians and operated a dental clinic using a lawn chair and available light coming through a small window filled with curious faces. There are many other remote areas of Honduras which cannot be reached by any type of motorized vehicle, and Dr. Holifield rode three and one-half hours by horse to pull teeth using a stump as a dental chair.

Christian people giving of themselves so untrillingly was new not only to the remote villagers, but also to some urban leaders. Dr. David Harms, Southern Baptist medical missionary working out of Tegucigalpa, shared that one of the communist leaders in Honduras said he was interested in what made the Christians tick. The communist said they could accomplish much through dedicated

What About Faith Healing?

By Malcolm Tolbert
Professor of New Testament
New Orleans Seminary

Along with tongues, exorcism, and the preoccupation with the end of the world there has been a heightened interest in miracles of healing in recent times. The thoughtful Christian is forced by circumstances to assess anew his own position in order to maintain some equilibrium and stability as he faces the chaotic fragmented religious scene of our times.

I offer the following reflections on the subject of faith healing with the hope that they will help my brothers and sisters to maintain a sane Christian approach to the subject in the midst of much confusion.

1. We believe that God created the world and that it operates for the most part in keeping with natural processes which God in His wisdom set in motion. Most diseases are subject to natural processes of remission. This means that we shall recover from most of our illnesses whether we take medicine, go to a doctor, pray, or do anything else.

When we get well in keeping with the natural order of things, we should be grateful to God for our healing. It is he who provides the healing defenses of our physical bodies. Such a cure, therefore, is just as divine as is any other healing. Indeed, many cures thought to be miraculous could probably be shown to have resulted from the natural process of remission if subjected to objective scrutiny. They are, nonetheless, the result of God's person's emotional condition.

2. Much of our illness is rooted in our emotions. Modern science has not been able to establish with precision the extent to which illness, even a disease like cancer, is related to a person's emotional condition. Diseases of this sort are especially susceptible to the power of suggestion. If a person has a disease whose causes are primarily emotional and he goes to a faith healer in whom he has confidence, he is apt to be helped.

Many physicians are poor healers because they are only "body mechanics." They fail to take into account the complexities and subtleties of our illnesses. For this reason a faith healer may be even more effective than a physician in dealing with certain problems. The same could be said of the witch doctor in more primitive cultures.

Some Possess Peculiar Powers

3. There are persons who seem to possess peculiar powers of healing. At least this is the conclusion that can be drawn from some studies in this area (see, e.g., Newsweek, April 29, 1974). But modern investigators have discovered that such power is not limited to persons who claim to heal by the power of Christ. Some of these "faith healers" belong to Eastern religions; some make no religious claim at all. Neither do the Christian healers belong to any one denomination. They are Baptist, Methodist, Episcopalian, Catholic. The evidence seems to show that you do not have to be too discriminating in terms of religion if you are seeking the help of a healer.

4. Many faith healers find their work to be very profitable in terms of money and notoriety. Faith healing is something, therefore, that attracts unethical, greedy people or those who desire personal power over others. It is inevitable that there would be many charlatans and demagogues in their ranks. It is probably impossible to distinguish those who are sincere from the charlatans, especially if your only contact with them is through radio and television. Not that sincerity is any guarantee of genuineness.

Sometimes Exploits

One of the most repulsive and tragic aspects of faith healing is that it often exploits desperate, pathetic persons who have no hope. The person with incurable cancer or the hopeless cripple, grasping for any straw, is an easy target for anyone who promises any hope at all. The experience of the majority of people like this with faith healers often is one of bitter disillusionment in the end.

5. The belief that God can and does occasionally intervene in the natural process to effect an unusual cure is a generally held conviction of Christians. It is firmly based in the Bible, where there are many accounts of miraculous healings. I too believe that God does heal people in mysterious ways at times. I also believe that if a sick person has faith in God and if

God is involved in the healing process in a personal way, the chances of recovery are better. It is right, proper, and productive, therefore, that we pray earnestly for the sick and that they pray for themselves.

6. We need to recognize, however, that it is wrong to draw simple parallels between the miracles of Jesus and healing miracles today. Jesus was not just a wandering miracle worker. His acts of healing were revelatory. They demonstrated that in him the kingdom (rule) of God was present among men. They were designed to convince receptive people that he was the Messiah. Indeed, in the gospel of John all the miracles are explicitly shown to have revelatory character.

Most of Jesus' contemporaries missed the genuine significance of his miracles in the same way that people do today. There was really no need for Jesus to prove to the people around him that divine healing was a possibility. They already believed that. But it was essential for them to perceive who Jesus was — that he was the bearer of God's power and salvation in a unique way. Miracles of healing were not then nor are they now essential to the gospel.

Checks 23 Patients Who Professed 'Cures'

Noted Surgeon Follows Up Reports On Faith Healing, Says He Found None

MINNEAPOLIS (RNS) — A noted Minnesota surgeon and author, after following up on the cases of 26 patients who thought they had been "healed" at a famous faith healer's religious services here, says he couldn't find a single cured patient in the group.

Dr. William A. Nolen of Litchfield, Minn., who wrote the best-seller, The Making of a Surgeon, also says that the limited improvement reported by some patients can easily be explained either by the normal up-and-down courses of the diseases or the power of suggestion.

He found two cancer patients in much worse shape. He found that some patients didn't even suffer from the disease reported, and one who dramatically left a wheelchair she didn't really need.

But no intentional fraud was uncovered.

The study of faith healing was done as part of a new book, Healing: A Doctor in Search of a Miracle, that he has written for publication in January.

Dr. Nolen attended services held by Kathryn Kuhlman because, he noted in excerpts from the book published in the current McCall's Magazine, he considers her "probably the most highly regarded of the Christian faith healers."

"I went into this not to put down Kathryn Kuhlman — anything but," he explained in an interview with the Minneapolis Tribune, pointing out that his own religious background had convinced him that faith could play some role in healing.

"Doctors have a bad reputation for being nay-sayers without looking," he added. "I would have been delighted

if I could have demonstrated that this was divine intervention."

With Miss Kuhlman's permission, he served as an attendant at her services in the Minneapolis Auditorium in June 1973, helping push patients in wheelchairs. He wrote in the names and addresses of 82 persons who, responding to Miss Kuhlman's appeal to come to the stage if "you've been healed," walked or were wheeled up.

Six weeks later he begun attempts to contact them. Some, he said, realized by the next day they hadn't been helped at all and "would like to forget it now."

Some couldn't be found. But Dr. Nolen did end up interviewing 23 people on the list.

"These were people who still insisted they had been cured, or they hedged it and said that had been helped," he explained. But as a doctor, after studying these cases, he wrote that "I was led to an inescapable conclusion. Not one had been miraculously cured of anything."

All had illnesses — from acne to walking problems — that either have normal up-and-down courses, or are influenced easily by the powers of suggestion, or both, he explained.

One, for example, was a tall intelligent 18-year-old girl suffering from multiple sclerosis. She once had been confined to a wheelchair, but with conventional medical treatment now easily could walk with a cane.

But she had become tired waiting in line to enter the healing services and was given a wheelchair in which to rest.

When Miss Kuhlman said, "Go into the aisle, you people with spinal injury, but don't come up on the stage till you know you've been healed," the girl said she felt a tingling in her spine and walked onto the stage — with an usher dramatically bringing the wheelchair up behind her.

After the services, she continued using the cane, but told Dr. Nolen she felt her walking had improved.

"Her doctors had been unable to measure any real change in her muscle strength," Dr. Nolen reported, and "to my eyes there was no discernible improvement in her gait." She did report less headaches.

Dr. Nolen noted that multiple sclerosis is a disease whose "symptoms may come and go," and in which the person's mental attributes play a role in how they feel.

He said he was surprised that not a single cancer patient was among the 23 who reported they had felt they had been cured. So he checked further. Two patients were much worse. A third case:

A woman had come forward at the services to "claim" a cure when lung cancer patients were called for. At Miss Kuhlman's suggestion, she had "proved" her cure by taking deep breaths without any pain.

Medically, Dr. Nolen said, this was no surprise. "I know that most patients with lung cancer can breathe deeply," he wrote. But when he contacted her later, he was surprised to find "she had not had lung cancer at all." He quoted her as explaining: "I have Hodgkin's disease (cancer of the lymphatic tissue) and some glands in my chest are involved. But since no one else got up when Miss Kuhlman said, 'Someone with lung cancer is being cured,' I figured it had to be me."

"I've been back to my doctor and he says he can't see any change in my x-ray. I think I breathe better, but it's hard to tell, since I never had much trouble breathing anyway."

SCRAPBOOK

Fall, Leaves, Fall

Fall, leaves, fall; die, flowers, away;
Lengthen night and shorten day;
Every leaf speaks bliss to me,
Fluttering from the autumn tree.
I shall smile when wreaths of snow
Blossom where the rose should grow;
I shall sing when night's decay
Users in a drearier day.

—Emily Bronte (1818-1848)

When Life Becomes

An Autumn Leaf

There's a long road stretching
Out in front of me —
Far into the sunset,
Far as I can see.
Stay with me, pray with me,
Go on awhile with me;
We can laugh together —
Laugh, and sing and smile,
Each of us is traveling
Down a long lonesome road,
But we can keep each other company
And lighten each our load.
Walk by my side and hold my hand;
Your patience is my light —
Your touch an ever brighter strand —
To guide me through the night.
When life becomes an autumn leaf
And winter's dressed in snow,
Grant me one wish in selfish grief:
May I BE THE FIRST TO GO.

—Author unknown.

Listening

I used to sit for hours listening to him talk and talk and talk, (forgetting it was supertime),
enthralled at the many things
he could tell us all,
that eventually became a part of us.
But at the end of every session
someone (never me)
would say, "Aw, that isn't true!"
and he would always reply,
"I know, but it makes a good tale,
don't it?"

—Mark Leggett

In Memoriam

In the great waters of this creation I have attended Thee:
Well or ill, Thou alone shall judge.
When the long cruise is over,
And my spirit returns from whence it came;
When the anchor is fast and the last pipe
dies away
And the lanterns flicker;
In that apocalyptic moment when the lightnings flash before the tree falls
In thy unfathomable mercy
grant unto me, broken and defiled,
The gift of Thyself for the watch
that shall have no end.

—Navy Sabbath

Step By Step

He does not lead me year by year,
Nor even day by day,
But step by step my path unfolds;
My Lord directs my way.
Tomorrow's plans I do not know;
I only know this minute;
But He will say, "This is the way,
By faith now walk ye in it."
And I am glad it is so,
Today's enough to bear;
And when tomorrow comes, His grace
Shall far exceed its care.
What need to worry then, or fret?
The God who gave His Son
Holds all my moments in His hand
And gives them out by one.

cess whether they recognize it or not.
If I am ill, I am going to ask my friends to pray for me. Also, I am going to take advantage of all the good things that God has put in his world for my welfare. And, should I get well, I shall give glory to God
for my health.

Also, if another person gets well
from a serious illness, I am going to be glad no matter how his healing takes place. He may attribute his recovery to a Katherine Kuhlmann or some other healer. I have no way of proving that his belief is not true. I do not know if she is a charlatan or a sincere believer. I have no way of proving whether the sick person's disease was physical or psychosomatic.
But I do not have to prove any of that. Whether Katherine Kuhlmann is a saint or a demagogue has no bearing on my theology. My theology is based on the gospel whose center is God's redemptive act in Jesus Christ.

But if a sick person gets well by whatever means, I am going to be glad and thankful that he is better.

8. The person of greatest faith is not the person who trusts in God for healing and receives it. The person of greatest faith is the one who longs desperately for a miracle and does not receive it, but who nevertheless maintains a strong and victorious trust in God. The word faith has been preempted by some circles and given the meaning of expecting a miracle from God. We must not allow this word to be usurped in this way. Such faith often borders on the kind of presumption rejected by Jesus in the temptations (Matt. 4:5-7).

All Subject To Death
After all, we do not believe that God's activity on our behalf is confined to this life. And we believe that all of us are subject to death at one time or another, no matter how strong our faith. But we also believe that God one day will do for us what doctors, medicine, or faith healers cannot do. He will give us life in wholeness and health.

9. One of the greatest dangers in faith healing is that it tends to pervert the true gospel emphasis. Many Christians and preachers tend to become entirely one-sided by constantly focusing attention on one thing, e.g., healing, and by so doing completely distort a belief that might have validity if given its proper peripheral or secondary role. The gospel is not a constant repetition of stories about healing miracles. It is not a constant call for faith that expects miracles.
By taking something peripheral and making it central, we pervert the gospel just as surely as if we proclaim a false message. The gospel is the proclamation that God has acted in Jesus Christ to bring us into a relationship with him that is the basis for our hope of the life that we long for (see Rom.
1:1-14).

What we need to do is preach the gospel, get involved in the ministries of helping and healing through the resources God has given to us, pray for the sick and all others in need,
and, through the experiences of pain
and sorrow, grow in our trust in the God who guarantees a future that is not threatened by sickness or death.

at the Southern Baptist Bible Institute in Tegucigalpa, and a second Miskito is ready to graduate there soon."

Half an hour from the Wilkersons'
home by dug-out canoe is the model
village of Yazoo. A Jack-of-all-trades, Landon Wilkerson has tried to help
meet the physical needs of these people, as well as their spiritual needs.
He teaches them how to farm, how to build houses, how to dig wells—anything to make their lives better.
"They learn by doing, and it takes time," he says.

This model village is being funded through Agricultural Missions Foundation of Yazoo City, Mississippi.

Eventually it will consist of homes
for 24 families, or about 120 people,
a chapel, community meeting house,
and school building. Now 12 homes are complete and a general store and boat house. Six families live in Yazoo and are building kitchens (separate from the house for fire prevention and to make the living area cooler). Two wells have been dug. An experimental rice project (two crops a year) appears successful. Many coconuts and cashew nut trees have been planted.

The residents are improving their homes with making beds, tables and chairs. These houses have luxurious tin roofs, in comparison to the thatch and bamboo of other houses. Steve Cherry from the U. S. Peace Corps lives in the village now, and is teaching the people basic hygiene — to brush their teeth, clean up themselfs and their houses.

Each home is to have its own garden, septic tank and drinking water supply. Each inhabitant will learn,
through working, about livestock,
poultry, basic agriculture, personal hygiene, and domestic situations.
Each arrival is "cleaned" of intestinal parasites and contagious diseases.
(Parasites and tuberculosis are the greatest health problem. The average life span of the Miskito is 45 years.)

It is reported that the annual income of the Miskito Indians is equivalent to $2 cash in U. S. money. The people grow corn, beans, rice,

and subsist on these crops and yuca-ca and breadfruit until they produce another crop the next year. In event of a disaster, such as a hurricane,
they live on roots, tree crabs, and other wild foods.

Living in the house on the pilings,
the Wilkerson children (the youngest born in Honduras) have adjusted well to their way of life. One day the boys went rushing in saying, "Come and see what we've got—" Outside was a wooly clump of seaweed which their father discovered was a three-toed sloth that Billy had lassoed behind the clinic.

In many ways, life in the Siberia of Honduras is better now because the Wilkersons moved there seven years ago. "We have been married nineteen years," they recall, "and the past eight have been our happiest. Those years before we knew Christ were only wasted ones. We know HE LIVES, and we like to share with other people what the Lord
means to us."

Ode To The Ocean

By Donella Erdman

To some people the ocean is just a body of water, that's all;
but to me it is indescribably beautiful. If you love it, some overpowering, irresistible urge draws you to her coastlines. Long before reaching her, you will hear that never-ending, muffled roar.

Gaze out over that vast expanse and watch with fascination the unfolding glory, as through the mist the first faint flush of the rising sun illuminates the sky and gradually tints the water with mellow pinks, deepening into reds as the day progresses. Finally dazzling you with incomparable beauty as she lies shimmering under the noontime sun.

On this kind of day she is quiet with only ripples lapping at your feet as you stand on the beach.

But you must know her too when you can feel the urgent under-current as she means with restlessness on a cold murky day. Ripples increase furiously until she roars in turbulence and sends billowing, mountainous waves surging towards the shore.

Stand on a cliff and watch the turmoil below as wave upon wave of rolling breakers reach a crescendo, ferment and boil over,
crashing and swirling snowwhite around the jutting rocks.

Perhaps the storm will subside and you may behold a crimson sunset. Suddenly—without warning—the sun will disappear from the horizon and purple shadows will be cast, until finally a curtain is drawn over the sea. And you hear only the sound of gentled waves lapping across the sand.

Yes, your heart will throb with the ebb and flow of the tide, and your senses will reel at the sheer beauty of one of God's works of art. The sea has some magnetic power. You will go back again and again—to hear her, to see her, and to be lost in her grandeur.

Seas Have Their Source

The lowest trees have tops, the ant her gall,
The fly her spleen, the little spark his heat;
The slender hairs cast shadows, though but small,
And bees have stings, although they be not great;
Seas have their source, and so have shallow springs:
And love is love, in beggars and in kings.

Bible Study Retreat At Tombigbee Park

Beautiful Tombigbee State Park in northeast Mississippi provided the facilities for a Bible Study Retreat for the Deaf,
sponsored by Calvary Church.

Clifford Bruffy, missionary to the deaf in the Washington, D. C. area, left, was guest speaker for the Bible study retreat at Tombigbee Park. He is pictured with Bill Davis, Center, minister of education at Calvary, Tupelo, and Jerry St. John, Associate, Cooperative Missions Department,
Mississippi Baptist Convention Board,
and state mission worker with the deaf.

Tupelo, on Labor Day Weekend, Aug. 31 - Sept. 1, in spite of rain and generally bad weather conditions, eighty people participated, some for only part of the time, but most enjoying to the full extent the fine teaching and preaching and the good fellowship. Forty - three stayed overnight in the Park — in the Lodge and in the campground.

Clifford Bruffy, outstanding preacher, and missionary to the deaf of the Washington, D. C. area, led the Bible study and the worship services. He is well-known to Mississippians, having married a Mississippian, the former Ruth Ann Melton, of Houston, and having worked in the state in earlier years.

Retreat director was Jerry
St. John, Associate, Cooperative Missions Department, MBCB. Mr. St. John interpreted all services for the hearing.

Registration began at 10 a.m.
Saturday. Bill Davis, minister of education, Calvary Church, gave the welcoming address.
On Saturday night Dr. Bob N.
Ramsay, pastor of Calvary, also spoke a word of welcome and reminded those present that the Sunday morning services are always interpreted for the deaf at Calvary, and that the church
plans an ever-expanding program of helpfulness to the deaf.
Mrs. Gladys Carter and Mrs.

Bobby Barrett are the interpreters at Calvary.

Planned activities of Saturday were concluded with an informal fellowship after the evening worship service, with refreshments furnished by ladies of Calvary Church.

May Field Allen, left, president of the North Mississippi Association of Deaf, talks with Lee Harlin, Guys Tenn., and Mrs. Annie Laurie Allen, director of the deaf ministry at Calvary Church, Tupelo.

Deaf delegates attending the recent Bible study retreat at Tombigbee State Park are pictured with those sponsoring the retreat, and with their families.

Events of Sunday included the traditional Sunday school session and morning worship. A short memorial service paid tribute to the late Leonard Holmes and the late Joe Matthews, men whose unselfish helpfulness to others won a lasting place for themselves in the hearts of all who knew them and set an example in Christian living that it is good to remember.

Sunday afternoon, the retreat concluded with an evangelistic emphasis, a plea for dedication of life to Christ, and prayer.

Many deaf persons from Mississippi, Alabama, and Tennessee remained for the noon luncheon Sunday, September 1, at the Bible study retreat.

Sunday School Lesson: International

God's People Demand A King

By William J. Falls
1 Samuel 8; 12

The early government of the tribes of Israel in Canaan has been called a confederacy. Although they had no king, they were generally committed to one God, one sanctuary for worship, and one code for conduct. After Joshua's death (about 1200 B.C.) the leaders of the tribes were called judges, most of whom won their fame by military prowess. The last of these judges was Samuel, but he was a mediator and spiritual leader rather than a fighter. He grew up in the house of the Lord with Eli's guidance, was given a special revelation of God's will, and became known as a prophet. In dispensing justice Samuel made an annual circuit to Bethel, Gilgal, Mizpah, and back man in our study of how God led his chosen people into nationhood for achieving his purpose.

The Lesson Explained SAMUEL PRESENTS SAUL AS KING (vv. 13-15)

Despite Samuel's devotion to God and service to his people, when he set up his sons as judges in Beersheba, the people complained. The sons "took bribes, and perverted judgment" (8:3). When the elders of the people asked for a king instead of judges, Samuel was displeased. He felt rejected; but when he prayed, the Lord said they were rejecting himself rather than Samuel. As the Lord instructed, Samuel told the people what bad treatment they might expect from a king. When they still insisted, the Lord said, "Make them a king." Saul, son of Kish, was chosen. Menaced continually by Ammonites and Philistines, the tribal confederacy seemed weak and unorganized; it had no united nations in having one ruler who could lead their fighting force. They were willing to risk some tyranny to gain an apparent national unity. Saul's leadership in the victory at Jabesh-gilead convinced them that he was the man.

Samuel then led the people to Gilgal to "renew the kingdom" — naming Saul as king and offering sacrifices to the Lord.

In presenting the new ruler, Samuel pointed out that the Lord had allowed it. He also made it clear that the monarchy would not change the basic relationship between the Lord and his people. A better translation of the last clause in verse 14 is: "and if both you and the king who reigns over you will follow the Lord your God, it will be well" (RSV). One the other hand, disobedience and rebellion would bring judgment. Since the king had been selected from among the people, he was also answerable to the Lord.

A STORM PROVES GOD'S AUTHORITY (vv. 16-18)

Samuel had not finished with his charge that Israel's wanting a king was a sin against the Lord. He called attention to the fact that it was wheat harvest time. That came in May-June when cloudless skies were the rule, and rain was almost unheard of. But Samuel promised that the Lord would send thunder and rain, and this would prove that the Lord was displeased with them. When Samuel prayed, the thunder and rain came, and the people were terrified.

Before, they had seemed willing to have the "kingship" of the Lord in a religious sense, but they wanted a human king to guide their earthly ventures. Now they were bothered in conscience, but they did not suggest giving up their king. Even stranger is the fact that Samuel did not suggest it; he confirmed their wickedness and urged them not to turn away from the Lord. Perhaps he was willing to accept the new political development so long as the people did not forsake their primary loyalty.

SAMUEL REASSURES THE PEOPLE (vv. 22-24)

A true prophet knows the character of God. Samuel knew that since the Lord had chosen Israel for a purpose, he was committed to the people. Although he would surely punish them for disobedience, the Lord would not discard them. That would show him up as arbitrary, uncertain, and immoral, which would be contrary to his character. However the nation might embarrass him, the Lord would not disown it. Samuel was confident in God's integrity.

Samuel showed much the same attitude in promising to continue praying for the people and teaching them "the good and right way." He felt they had sinned grievously against

Sunday School Lesson: Life and Work

When A Life Goes Out Of Control

Mark 5:1-20
By Bill Duncan

If you would like to know what it is like to be estranged from society, ask someone who has had an emotional or mental breakdown. Most people who suffer from this disease are rejected and scorned.

Dr. S. I. McMillen says, "About nine million Americans suffer from emotional and mental illness. As many hospital beds are filled by the mentally deranged as are occupied by all the medical and surgical patients combined. In fact, one out of every 20 Americans will have a psychotic disturbance severe enough to confine him in a hospital for the insane. Mental disease is indeed the nation's No. 1 health problem. What does it cost to take care of the patients in our mental hospitals? The annual cost is about one billion dollars. Besides outside the asylums, there are a vast number who do not need confinement but who are incapable of supporting themselves." This cost does not include the heartache and confusion in the families from which these patients are admitted.

The actions of the people today are the same as they were in Jesus' day. The only difference is that modern psychology and psychiatry have coined a lot of new names like paranoia, schizophrenia, and the like. In the New Testament times they simply said a demon had moved into the person and taken possession.

Look at the good of the man who was estranged. It may seem strange to you, but when Jesus encountered the Georassene maniac in the Palestine cemetery, the man worshipped Jesus. This experience of help began with the recognition of the worth of God. That Jesus was no ordinary man this insane man could discern.

I mention the idea of the good because most people close their minds to the mentally disturbed. They may be afraid of them. They are different. But they still have the need of love.

The man said to Jesus, "My name is Legion; for we are many." His confession is so natural. He was not himself. Yet, he wanted Jesus to leave him alone and not disturb him. Thank God, Jesus did not leave him alone but broke the wrong spirit in order to give him a chance to possess the right spirit.

So many people who have emotional or mental problems, pull the curtains on their lives and try to shut the world out. Yet the Christian thing to do is to try and enter their world with kindness and love. The estranged are not coming to us. We must go to them as did Jesus.

To the man possessed by the wrong spirit Jesus said, "What is thy name?" A name in the Bible means more than an identification number. A name describes a person. To know the person was to have influence over him. When Jesus asked the man his name, he was saying: "Trust me, put yourself in my hands." The man was willing to confide in Christ.

This may be called counseling. This may be called love. But the moment the man put himself into the hands of Christ, the evil which dwelt within him lost its power and was driven out.

Jesus practiced exorcism. He saw the evil spirit come out of the man. If this was not true, I believe the Bible would say so. The result was that Luke tells us they found the man clothed, and in his right mind. His way of life became sensible. He had his life under control. He began to live according to the principles of wisdom and truth.

I have seen the modern evil spirits of hate, lust, greed, selfishness taken away by the power of God. I have seen fear and anger overcome by God's power. I never called it exorcism. I called it, "sharing Jesus Christ and encouraging the individual to let the power of God work in his life."

There is a sad note in the story. The evil spirits entered into some swine. The swine destroyed themselves and thus the economy suffered. The result was that the people of that area asked Jesus to leave. They were more concerned about the loss of profit than the power of God. The Bible says they were afraid. Fear of the unknown can rob us of many blessings.

There are too many today that are more concerned with profits than people. The Christian community must always remember that people are first. They are more important than programs.

The church should provide a caring fellowship for the people suffering from our No. 1 health problem. We must provide a caring fellowship for the patient's family. Those back at home may be suffering more than the hospitalized.

While I was the pastor at Brandon, we lived very close to Whitfield, our state mental hospital. Many of the fine staff were members of our church. Therefore, I have happy memories of the good work which I observed at the hospital. Our church and house faced the highway which went from Brandon to Whitfield. I watched many sheriffs' cars carry persons out to Whitfield. I knew where they were headed. I always tried to speak because I wanted to express some thought of kindness.

Today every road leads to a place where you find people for whom life has gotten out of control. We never know who we will meet. But I am so happy that there is hope and help for these persons.

Compassion was what Jesus used to minister to the estranged of his day. I am convinced that the greatest Christian trait is love, not faith or hope. "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

the Lord — and perhaps also against himself — but that was no reason to forsake them. They probably would need him as the Lord's spokesman while a king reigned as much as before he was crowned. The prophet would remind them of what the Lord had done; the king might stress his own accomplishments.

Little Is Much With God

By Odessa W. Pickett, Pastor, First, Natches
John 6: 1-13

Many times a person gets the idea that he is of no value to Jesus or the church because he cannot sing, or speak, or teach, or lead, or talk to people effectively. He gets discouraged spiritually because his life seems so useless when compared with others. Such a person has the idea that one must have a "job" in the church before he can make any contribution to the Kingdom of God. This is not true. All that God asks of us is that we use what we have for His Glory and Honor. And unto those who have been given much, much is required.

The sixth chapter of John, verses 1 - 13, records the miracle of Jesus feeding five thousand people because a little boy gave what he had to Jesus — five loaves and two small fish.

All of us are like that boy. The only thing God asks of us is that we put at His disposal our talents and abilities. We may not have much to bring to Jesus, but He can use what we have. Little is always much in the hands of Christ.

Your life completely dedicated to God can be a great witness for Him. Your faithfulness to the worship services of the church are a marvelous testimony. Your daily walk with Christ may very well be the determining factor in someone becoming a Christian.

When we are willing to give our best to Jesus, no matter how little it may seem. He will use it for His own glory and bless us in the giving.

McLaurin Burns Note

McLaurin Church near Hattiesburg celebrated its 75th anniversary on September 15. At the end of that day's celebration, a noteburning ceremony was held. Rev. George Bosarge, interim pastor, is pictured holding the note while Algie Dunkley, chairman of deacons, sets fire to it. The $18,000 note, issued six and one-half years ago for a 20-year period, was paid in full in one third the allotted time.

Northwest Hills Calls Associate Pastor

On September 15, Northwest Hills, 1931 Bolling Street, Jackson, extended a call to Rev. Jasper Collins as associate pastor.

This is an unusual experience for Mr. Collins because formerly he was pastor of Magnolia Park Church, Jackson, for fourteen years, before Magnolia Park and Northwest Hills Church were merged.

Rev. James Morgan, pastor of Northwest Hills, Rev. Fred Tarpley, Hinds-Madison superintendent of missions, and the deacons of both churches led in the carrying out of the merger.

Northwest Hills now reports that there has been a "splendid spirit of cooperation and a real expression of Christian love in the fellowship. The church is moving forward rapidly under the leadership of the Spirit, through the staff and members."

MADRID, Spain — The annual convention of the Spanish Baptist Union was held recently in the Badalona Baptist Church in Barcelona Province. Four Cuban Baptist leaders were present in the convention, after their return from an executive committee meeting of the Baptist World Alliance in Louisville, Ky.

McAdams Church To Celebrate 125th Year

On October 6, McAdams Church in Attala County will observe its 125th anniversary. Begun as Samaria Church, meeting in a one-room building, it has now expanded into a church with many ministries.

The anniversary celebration, which will be combined with the Grand Opening of the new Family Life Center, has also been designated as Building Fund Day. Regular morning services will be held, with Sunday School at ten, followed by the eleven o'clock worship service conducted by Pastor Joe Anderson, whose message will emphasize "The Building of the Kingdom."

"Dinner on the ground" (or in the new building) will be served at noon. This will be followed by an afternoon program with music provided by choir such as the "villagers" from the Children's Village in Jackson, and other singing groups and individuals.

All who will, especially former members, are invited to attend.

Off The Record

A fisherman who had been nabbed by a game warden for exceeding his limit on black bass was hailed into the local county courthouse, where he quickly admitted his guilt. "That'll be $10 per fish and court costs," pronounced the judge. After paying his fine, the angler approached the judge and cheerfully asked, "And now, Your Honor, if I may, I'd like several copies of the court record to show my friends. — Good Reading."

A very pretty girl from the Deep South told an austere professor at the school of speech that she wished to smooth out her pronounced southern accent before trying for a dramatic role. "I shall attend to your case personally," said the professor. "Speech is influenced by speech, so I think my perfect diction will solve your difficulty."

Some weeks later, after the professor had spent many hours in diligent instruction, he told her, "Ah'm proud of you, ma deah — an' heah is youah diplomah." — WOW Magazine.

Ask a Silly Question...

Mark Twain answered, "How about rheumatism and St. Vitus dance?"

A child, about to receive a shot from the doctor, put on a bold front until the very last minute, when he saw the approaching needle. Then, he leaned over and whispered to the doctor, "I think I hear your mother calling you."
